Introduction

In this engaging teaching activity, students race to complete sentences that use coordinating and subordinating conjunctions.

Procedure

Divide the students into pairs.

Have one student from each pair come to your desk and pick up sentence card 1.

The student then goes back to their partner with the card.

The two students then race to complete the sentence in a meaningful way that demonstrates the use of the coordinating or subordinating conjunction in the sentence, adding in any necessary punctuation.

When the students have completed the sentence, they come back to your desk and show you the sentence.

If it is correct, give them the second card.

If not, the students take the card back and try again.

The first pair of students to complete all 20 sentences correctly wins.
